Hello!

Thank you for inviting me to be with you today!

I'm excited to share where I am today thanks to the support of my loving family, friends and members of my Microboard.

Christopher Hunnicut

The Journey Begins

Though my parents didn't know much about Down syndrome...
They believed God had a VISION for our lives... That VISION included me living together with them and my sister.

"Vision"

Small Word. BIG Impact

A clear vision provides a sense of direction; a “north star” that changes as we change over time.

It influences all areas of life... including family, spirituality, physical well-being, leisure, and work.

Their Vision Shaped My Future

For me, the vision was to be myself at school and in the community with every body else.

It is important to say...

Our family does believe there is a place where separate and special is valuable, AND yet our fundamental belief is that people with challenges should be learning, working, worshiping, and having fun... LIVING right in the Community with others from the community.

Life Lessons I Learned from Childhood

- ✓ Fair play and sharing or sometimes not sharing
- ✓ Competition
- ✓ Skills
- ✓ Teamwork
- ✓ Making and being a friend
- ✓ Power of humor

...as a Student

I went to class and learned alongside my classmates...

Volunteered in my community

Went on Mission trips...

Life Lessons as a Student

Like my typical classmates, I learned:

- Reading, writing and math
- Helping others and working in a team
- Giving back
- Striving and handling hard stuff

Through my experiences as a student, I began to realize:

- MY gifts, talents, interests and skills
- MY input is important
- My goals and roles
- My involvement makes a difference

I came to understand:

- I can learn
- I can grow
- I can influence a larger cause

Visions... Change

You know what the Rolling Stones sang...

“You Can’t Always get What you Want.”

Visions that “Morphed”

My VISION of becoming a Power Ranger...

...Didn't happen

Instead, I earned a Black Belt in martial arts.

Visions that “Morphed”

My VISION of going to Berry College...

Not ...

I went to Kennesaw State University ...

In May 2011, I graduated the Inclusive Post-Secondary Education program there. Now you see how VISION guided our Direction to this point....

Let's learn more about the power of Microboards ...

Application to Microboards some imperatives...

- Know the interests, gifts, strengths & dreams of the focus person (in GA we use a tool known as a PATH, picture follows)
- Determine who knows the focus person well and cares about their future
- Invite them to gather (FOOD helps!) and begin considering what to accomplish, on what time frame, and what priorities
- Regularly gather (quarterly is about right) to discuss and adjust plans
- Utilize team & individual's strengths to influence outcomes of the Microboard
- Rotate members on and off the Board as situations change to keep fresh ideas and energy

My PATH in 2014

My PATH in 2017

As my PATH shows, faith & friendships are important to me. Here are a few of my “Friends in Faith”.

SOME TYPICAL QUESTIONS REGARDING MICROBOARDS

- Does a Microboard replace the need for paid supports? What is their interface?
- How do you work up the courage to invite people to join the Microboard?
- How long do folks typically stay on the board? What do you think about when inviting new board members?
- What's the range of involvement of the Microboards' members (from most involved to less involved)?

Do You Know How The Rolling Stones Finished The Song?

“If you try sometimes, you just might find you get what you need.”

I'd like to thank my parents, friends and Microboard members, the Georgia Microboard Association, and NCAPPS.

Human relationships are primary in all of living. When the gusty winds blow and shake our lives, if we know that people care about us, we may bend with the wind... but we won't break.

An Introduction to a Person-Centered
Solution Offering Full Accountability,
Active Community Support, and
Lifelong Continuity of Care

Christopher, Stuart, and their families and friends remind us that we all need acceptance and understanding, trustworthy companions, valued social roles and many opportunities to contribute to the life and well-being of our communities.

Families need lifelong trustworthy sources for continuity of care and creative solution-seeking for their sons and daughters. We need strong partners to help us create good lives on a day-to-day basis.

Community partners and direct support professionals need understandable models for making meaningful differences in one person's life.

Governments and forward-looking service providers need clear, sustainable methods for making services and supports more person-centered, family-friendly, and directed by the people and families who are being supported.

Elements of a Good Life

- Autonomy and Interdependence
- A Life that is Rich in Relationships
- Meaningful Employment
- Meaningful Contributions
- Valued Social Roles
- A Home of My Own
- Financial Security
- Continuity of Care and Advocacy
- Person-Centered Supports

A World of 'Programs'

- Caseworkers
- Protective Service Workers
- Public or Private Guardians
- Traditional Provider Agencies
- Day Programs
- Supported Employment Programs
- Sheltered Workshops
- Group Homes
- 'Supported Living' Programs

Over the last twenty years or so, the states, aided by CMS and other federal initiatives, have tried a number of different approaches to changing this picture.

Some states are working to 're-engineer' state-operated services and traditional provider agencies in the direction of more person-centered practices.

This is important work, but it tends to take a great deal of time, involves many moving parts, and existing service architecture may be presenting some built-in 'restraining forces'.

Many states are providing individualized Waiver funding to traditional service providers.

But there's no guarantee that a given provider can operate in a way that is fully person-centered, or that the provider can fully support self-direction.

Some states may be providing individualized funding directly people and their families

But these direct funds are often limited in amounts, and there are few safeguards in the event of a family member's incapacity or unavailability as people age.

Finally, some states are engaging ‘fiscal intermediaries’ to help individuals and families manage direct funds and to ensure an increased degree of accountability.

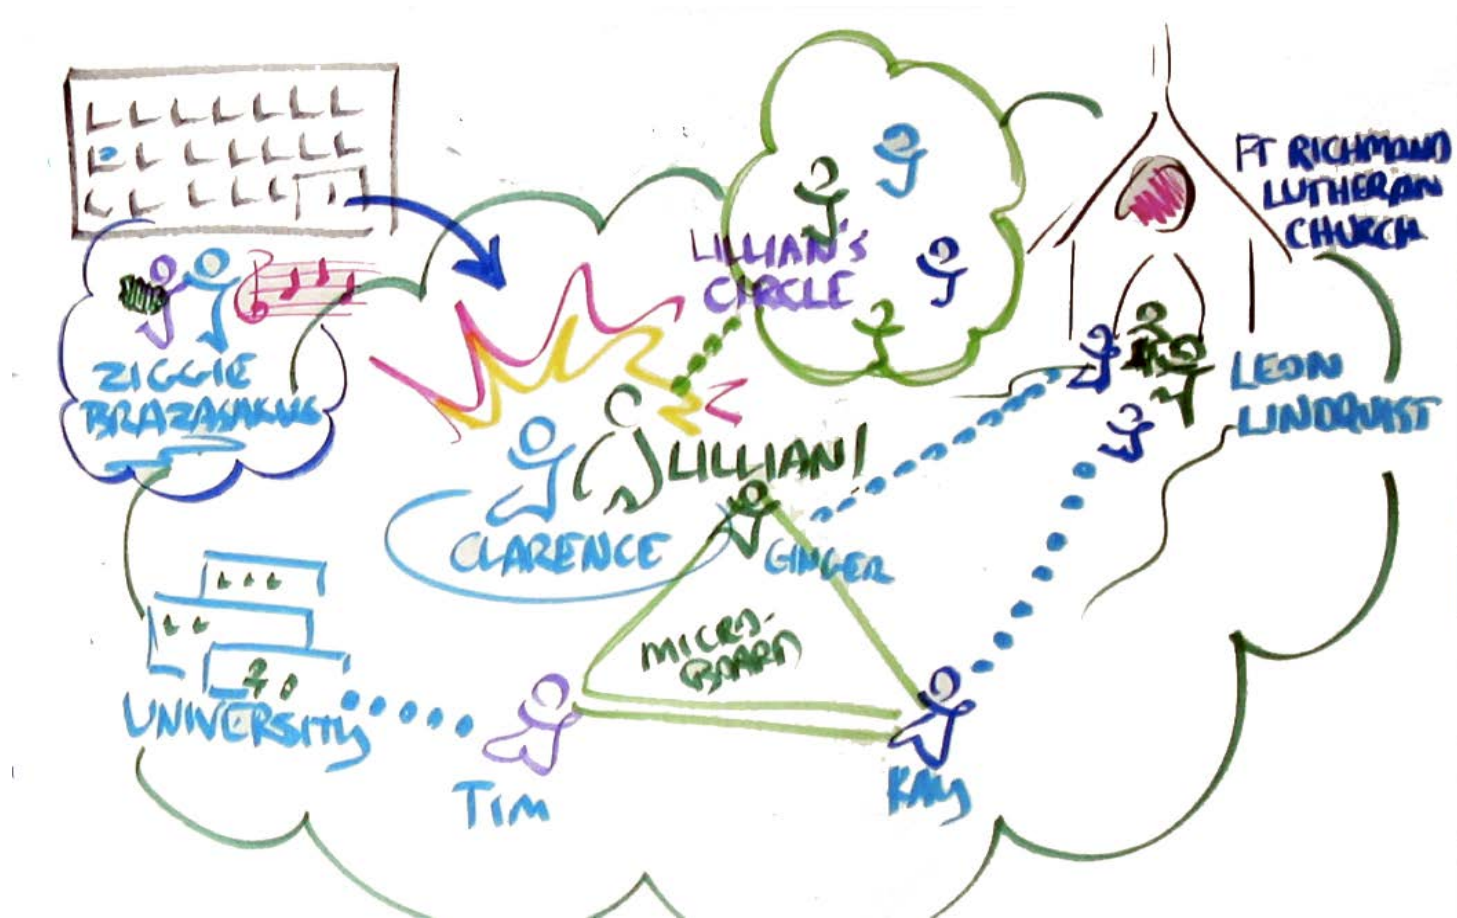

But fiscal Intermediaries often stand in the role of 'employer of record', making it difficult for the person and/or their family to adapt quickly to someone's changing needs or provide effective direction to support workers.

There is, however, another robust person-centered option, in which the state provides direct individualized funding to a small provider organization called a 'Microboard'.

Microboards are small (micro) nonprofit corporations (boards) that are designed to serve one person.

They are designed to last a lifetime and meet the state's needs for contract compliance, quality assurance and public accountability.

We created the first Microboard over thirty years ago.

That Microboard inspired a movement as people and families realized that the model would work for them and governments realized that they were working well for the people. There are now nearly 3,000 Microboards worldwide, including

- Vela Microboard Association in British Columbia
- Microboard Associations in
 - Wisconsin
 - Illinois
 - Georgia
 - Tennessee
 - Australia, the UK, Norway, and elsewhere

- The Microboard creates a person-centered plan and submits a program plan and budget to the state
- The state establishes a contract with the Microboard for specific services and supports

- The Microboard provides regular financial, program and outcome reports
- The state conducts routine evaluation, performance, and quality assurance reviews

- All of this can be done without requiring any changes in legislation, policy, regulation or administrative procedures.

Like any other provider, the Microboard:

- Employs and supervises direct support workers
- Purchases goods, services, and specialized supports,
- Purchases 'utility' services such as payroll, benefit plans, etc.

Because they serve only one person, Microboards have a number of important features that are 'baked into' their architecture ...

- Person-centered planning is 'baked in'
- Planning with the person, their family and trusted community partners is 'baked in'

- The person and their Microboard control who provides direct support on a day-to-day basis. As one of the organizers of a state-wide Association says, “You get to control who comes in your front door.”

- The supported person is a full member of the governing board, receiving whatever supports he or she needs to effectively express their sense of direction.

- Microboards strongly encourage and support the active involvement and engagement of community partners.

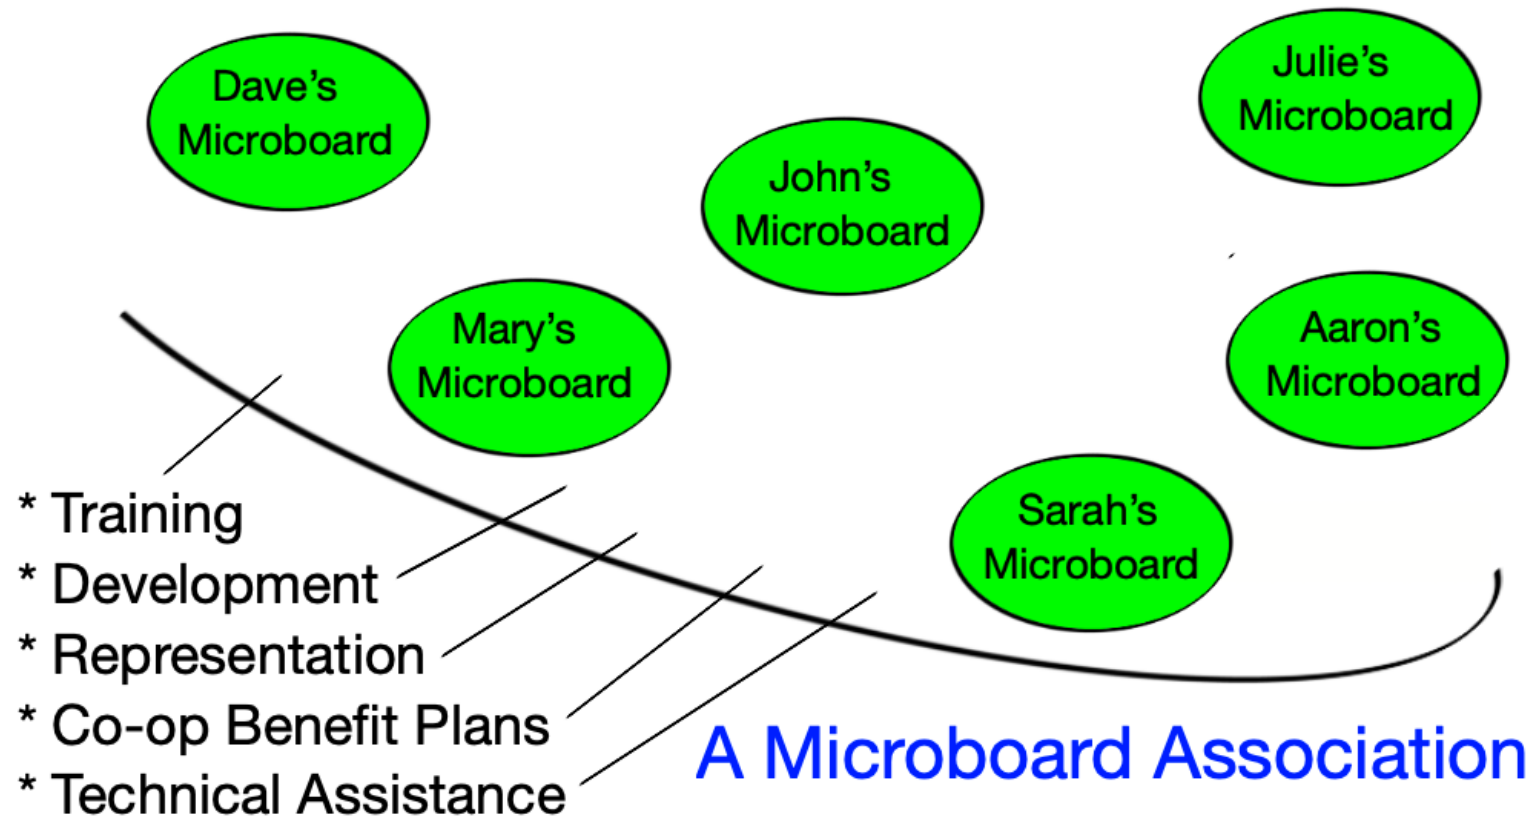

- These partners can offer invitation and membership in the community spaces in which they have standing and influence, greatly expanding the person's connections and opportunities.

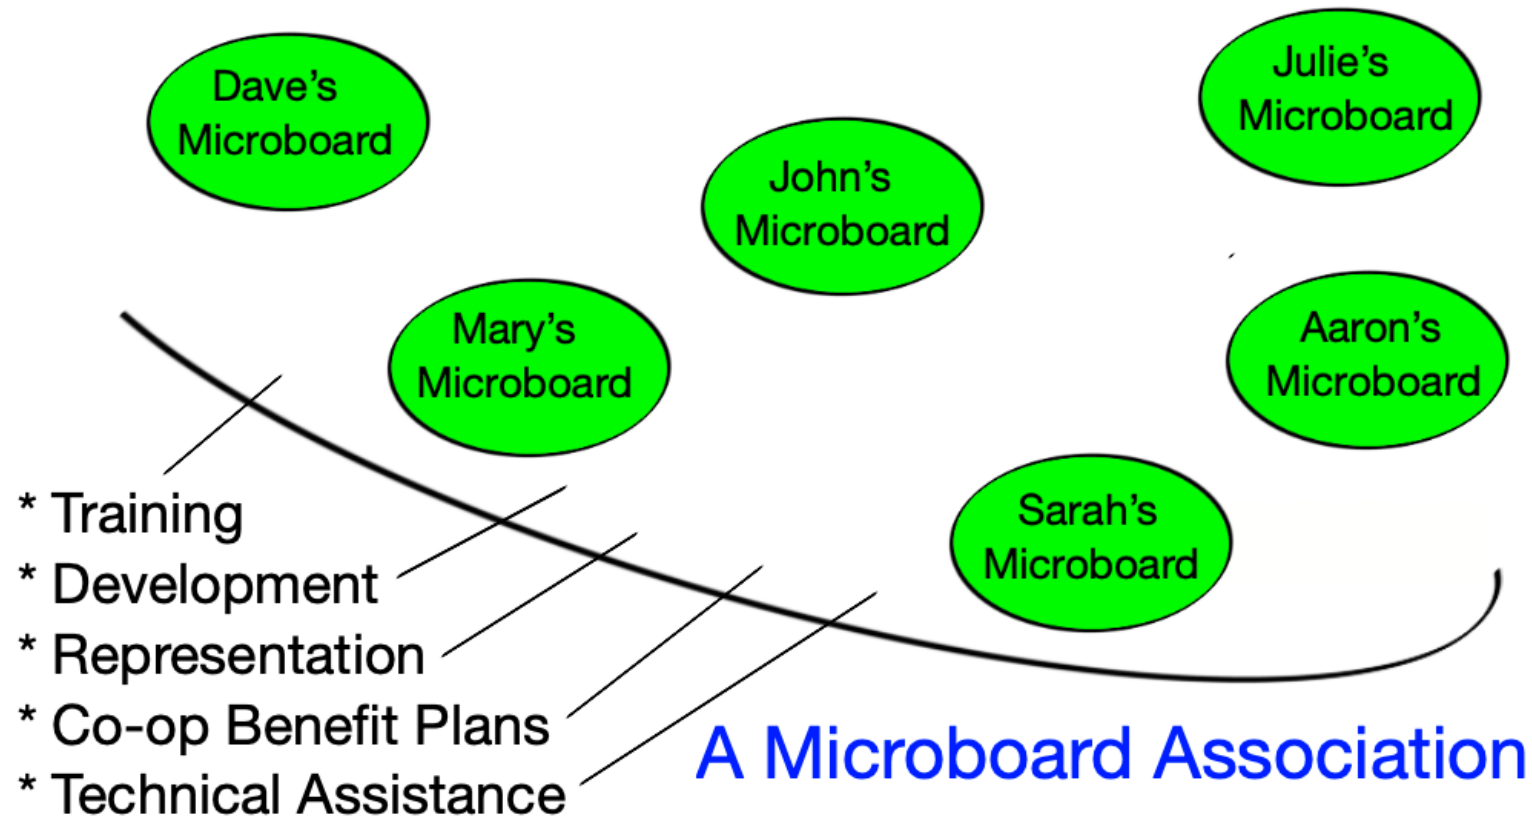

- Rapid adaptation and response is ‘baked in’, including the fact that ...
- The person can move to another house without losing their supports, and
- The person can choose another provider without losing their home.

- Continuity of care, advocacy, relationships and representation are 'baked in'
- Competition between people who are being supported is zero.
- Staff and management turnover is demonstrably reduced.

Microboards don't do this in isolation. Individual Microboards are developed and supported by local, regional or state-wide Microboard Associations.

This makes it possible for Microboards to receive high-quality training and technical support and share high-quality resources such as accounting services, benefit plans, HR consultation, etc.

Membership in the Association is voluntary, although some states are asking Associations to certify that a Microboard is in good standing and following established principles and practices.

It's helpful to look at the 'intersection' of two models: the Microboard, and a robust model for developing enduring circles of support, called the 'Star Raft'

The Star Raft is a circle of connection, collaboration, and support that is 'anchored' in the larger community.

In the absence of clear design and operating instructions, a 'circle' can seem like one of those fuzzy ideas that is impossible to implement with any reliability.

We know that the idea of a circle is very important

But the image of a circle doesn't give us much of an idea about how to do the work.

Albert Einstein once said, “Everything should be made as simple as possible, but not simpler”.

So we knew we needed a model that wasn't quite as simple as a 'circle'

For some time, we had been looking for a pattern that had all of the qualities we were seeking ...

... that had an understandable step-by-step method for building it and sustaining it

... a clear sense of direction

... and a metaphor that could help people understand the roles and responsibilities involved.

Finally we got a little breakthrough. We were sailing on the Lake of the Woods and someone invited us to join a 'star raft' for an overnight anchorage.

We learned that recreational sailors sometimes tie up in circles called 'star rafts' when they want to anchor in community.

We thought that this pattern might be a useful metaphor for the circles we were trying to build.

It occurred to us that this ...

... was like this

The sailing star raft is based on a nautical tradition of hospitality

People sharing connections and what they 'carry on board'

Helping new sailors 'learn the ropes'

Deciding how they will manage any hazards up ahead

Identifying interesting places to visit

And planning the next adventure together.

The star raft starts with an invitation, and it's built one boat – one conversation – at a time

Each new person brings new opportunities, insights, connections and capacities

Each has different interests and 'standing' in different places, so more opportunities show up

The shape creates a space in the middle where it's safe to swim, because everyone's in view and everyone is always within reach

People can see, encourage and support one another

They feel accountable to the person at the centre and to the group

They see the need for continuity, so they naturally keep adding new people

There's a sense of energy, creativity and celebration

And there are more people to share the work

The nautical metaphor offers some interesting ways to think about the roles that need to be fulfilled ...

The Owner
The Skipper
Navigator
Map-Maker
Log-Keeper
Radio Operator
Safety Officer
Hospitality Officer
Harbor Pilot

Eight Essential Nautical Roles

Owner
Skipper
Map-Maker
Navigator
Harbor Pilot
Radio Operator
Log-Keeper

In a single-handed sailboat, one person is responsible for filling all of the roles that are essential for safe and happy sailing: Owner, Skipper, Navigator, Radio Operator, Safety Officer, Harbor Pilot, and so on. In a larger boat, a family or a Star Raft circle, it's important for each of these roles to be filled and ultimately for lots of people to be good at these jobs.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Owner

It's important to be clear about the difference between the 'owner' of a boat and its 'skipper'. The Owner says where the boat is going. The Skipper takes responsibility for getting us there, keeping everyone safe, and organizing the contributions of the crew and passengers. In a Star Raft, the 'focus person' is always considered to be the Owner.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Skipper

When there's an agreement that people will share the nautical roles, the Skipper has ultimate responsibility for 'safe passage'. She has authority to organize everyone's work and responsibility to keep everyone safe on the water. In the long run, Star Raft circles work best when people take turns and get experience in all of the roles - especially the role of Skipper.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Navigator

The Navigator keeps track of where we started, where we're headed, where we are at the moment, what obstacles or traffic might lie ahead, and what course changes will get us from where we are now to where we're going. This is never about criticism or blame, so the Navigator has a kind of 'diplomatic immunity'. It's helpful to take turns in this role.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Radio Operator

Think about the role of the Radio Operator as keeping everyone connected and informed about what's going to happen next. These days, we use email and instant messaging, but the role is the same. On the water, the Radio Operator has an additional important role - that of sending out distress signals and listening for other vessels in distress.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Log-Keeper

In a Star Raft (and in life), it's often very helpful to keep a 'journal' - a record that allows us to reflect on our experience, learn from our history, and celebrate how far we've come. Keep a vivid graphic and verbal record of the journey - useful for learning, teaching future members, and sharing the story. With today's technology, you can use words, videos, drawings!

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Map-Maker

The early explorers sailed in uncharted territory, and they always made maps that allowed them to return home safely and make future journeys faster and easier. We now have tools that allow us to 'map' our connections and communities and quickly capture 'windows of opportunity' - people and places that pop up in conversation that we might miss unless we map them.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

Chief Steward

A wise person once said, "If you feed them they will come", and if we share this job around, Mom won't have to do all the baking. Hospitality, in its original sense, means 'friendliness to guests'. More than food, it connotes a sense of welcome, safety, comfort, and appreciation. It's important to have someone responsible for thinking about this and making it real in every gathering.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

The Harbor Pilot

When a big ship approaches a harbor, a Harbor Pilot will approach in a little boat, board the big ship, and skillfully navigate through shallows that the pilot knows well. This role comes into play when we need someone who can help us find our way into one of the community's Sweet Places. Find someone who already has standing in that place, and invite them into this role.

Essential
Nautical
'Roles'

Share these jobs around!

In sailing, in life, and in a Star Raft, we're bound to be safer, happier and having more fun if everyone on deck has a working knowledge of every job, can do any job in a pinch, and feels competent and confident about what they're doing. People will come and go, so continuity is important and practice is essential. So share these jobs around!

The Star Raft pattern also includes very clear descriptions about what we are asking people to do and step-by-step instructions for making those invitations:

Introduce us to people whom you already know and trust, and who know and trust you.

Systematically identify and mobilize the gifts and capacities of the person at the center

And ‘follow the threads’ of the person’s interests and gifts in the direction of connection, companionship and contribution

Look for the ‘sweet places’ in community

Be in relationship - become part of the person's life, and welcome him as part of yours

Make an agreement to be tied in for 'a while'

Bring other trusted people into the picture

Make and keep agreements on ‘major safeties’, balancing what’s important-to and important-for the person

Serve as a connector to community spaces in which you already have have ‘standing’

Remember that every person in every one of these places ...

...can lend their connections to anyone else

So every thread we follow ...

All Microboards start with a circle that is made up of allied family members, friends and community partners.

At any given time, a few members of the circle, including the person at the center, serve as directors of the Microboard corporation.

Other circle members may serve in additional roles, such as Supported Decision-Making partners, Financial Trustees, formal Representation Agreement partners and so on.

Circle members can also assist the person in being successful as a renter or owner his or her own home, or in customized employment.

all of these

Principles and Functions for Microboards

Email Print

All Microboards that we facilitate use the following Principles and Functions as their building blocks for development:

1. Microboard members must establish and maintain a personal relationship with the person for whom the board is created.
2. All people are assumed to have the capacity for self-determination. This capacity will be acknowledged, respected, and demonstrated in all of the dealings of the Microboard.
3. All planning and decisions made by a Microboard will demonstrate regard for the person's safety, comfort, and dignity, with consistent respect for his/her needs, wishes, interests, and strengths. This is called person-centered planning.
4. Microboard members will act as sponsors to the community, ensuring the person participates in community activities with Microboard members (e.g. family functions, social events). This is done in ways that are natural for each of the people involved.
5. Ensure the person has the opportunity to both receive from and give to his/her community, as well as with other individuals in his/her network.
6. All Microboard members will conduct their board business in the spirit of mutual respect, cooperation, and collaboration.

The 'Arc' of Microboard Development
David Wetherow and the Wisconsin Microboard Association

The 'Arc' of Microboard Development

In our experience, all Microboards (in fact all new enterprises of any kind) develop knowledge, skills, excellence in practice, and leadership over time in a trajectory that might be pictured as a kind of upward 'arc' of development.

The long-term goal of Microboard development, is to:

- Establish a formal, enduring organization in support of one person;
- Keep the person, their community partners and those who care about them the most at the center of decision-making and control by including them as valued members of the board;
- Establish a Board of Directors that reflects the person's interests, gifts, concerns and community as well as those who know them best and love them. This diversity is essential to the long-term purpose of any Microboard. Though this diversity may not fully exist at the time of incorporation, a plan to grow the Board is identified at incorporation.
- Engage a diverse, capable, committed and community-connected group of support staff (assistants) whose attitudes and interests are well-matched to the person at the center;
- Define the roles and job descriptions of staff members in ways that reflect the person's interests, systematically increase the person's connections in the larger community, and create a path for the person to be making valued contributions in the larger community;
- Function in a person-centered manner beyond the lives of the parents and/or guardians.
